VANCOUVER - A New Democratic Party study committee has recommended a leaflet campaign against large industrial polluters in British Columbia.

The proposal is part of a brief on environment and pollution which is under study by NDP convention delegates at the University of British Columbia. The brief asks the party to work with labor in researching the behavior of major polluters and publicize the results. "

It urges that "protracted campaigns be mapped around cases of flagrant violations with the objective of mobilizing even greater numbers of people against the polluters. Stiff fines for polluters rank high among the rest of the brief's proposals. Industries which fail to comply with pollution control measures, the brief says, may be taken

The plan was prepared by Dr. Richard Foulkes, executive director of Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster. It was presented to N.D.P. convention delegates here Friday as a background paper for debate:

Foulkes paper processes.

Foulkes' paper proposed consolidation of all medical services under a department of health security. His plan would virtually eliminate the existing fee-for-service payment method for doctors. The plan would redirect the purpose of health care toward prevention of disease instead-of concentrating on cures of concentrating on cures. Foulkes estimated 95 per cent of British Columbia's health dollar is spent in curing sickness. The British system of a per-patient per-year income for doctors as well as group practice would be insti-tuted.

The paper said these and other measures could reduce B.C.'s health costs between 25 and 33 per cent. This would have meant an estimated saving of $50 million to $68 million in fiscal year 1970-71. Specifically, Foulkes

PILOT GRABS HIJACKER

NASSAU, Bahamas (CP) - A former New York city policeman who said he had wrapped himself in explosives was overpowered today as he attempted to flee a hijacked jetliner with $500,000.

The hijacker, identified as James Bennett, 39, of Commack, N.Y., was hurled to the ground by senior pilot John O'Neill of Eastern Airlines as he walked toward a bag of money illuminated by the glare of a waiting automobile neadights.

O'Neill, 52, had stood quietly to one side of the runway.

He said he "sized up the hijacker" and, after deciding he "really wasn't armed," waited until he was close enough and then "just grabbed him in a good old headlock and wrestfed him to the ground.!'

About 30 United States customs agents, airport personnel and Nassau police then subdued Bennett and stripped him as

The bag containing $500,000 was delivered to the man by the airline in response to the hijacker's demand. The incident was similar to one in Australia Wednesday when a man was paid more than $500,000 after he threatened to blow up a

Meanwhile, the Bahamas suspect is being returned to Wondering when to test-drive mid-size Chevelle? There are lots of reasons to do it Chevelle lets you feel good when you're driving. The mid-size wheelbase (116-in, for sedans, 112-in, for coupes) handles nicely whether you're downtown or on the highway. Chevelle is styled with the fresh, young design that has made it so popular in the past. The new rear bumper has taillights. And there's a restyled front grille and bumper, too.

Some of the holdovers from last year bear repeating, too. Rubber bushings on the engine Chevelle mounts cut down on vibration and noise. The Full Coil suspension system features computer selected springs that are matched to the weight and equipment of the car. Flush-and-dry rocker panels let water flow through to clean dirt and corrosion-causing salt out, then air comes through to dsy the water up and prevent rust. All in all, your Chevelle will last longer. And drive better. But none of this is possible without your Chevrolet dealer. He's the one with the cars. There's the Sporty Malibu series, including a convertible for summer fun. The economical Chevelle series. And there are four mid-size wagons to choose from. Chevelle gives you more for your money. And your Chevy dealer is going to go a long way towards giving you the deal you want. Go see him about it. And take Chevelle out for a drive. You'll see what we mean.

If you look only at the noisy stage, mankind seems to be moving away from the ideal of One World and redividing itself into new splinters. But the stage is misleading. Behind the scenes events move in precisely the opposite directions. With all their foreign wars and domestic riots, the nations are not moving apart. They are moving together.

Current Wave

To take first the case of Canada, the current wave of nationalism apparently sweeps across the party lines, splits government and opposition, rolls from Halifax to Victoria and threatens to engulf us all. Yet at the very moment when the drama approaches a denouement of some sort observe what happens in the box offfice.

The government makes bold gestures against foreign economic penetration and Premier Bourassa is elected as the high priest of French Canadian nationalism and immediately seeks $6 billion from foreigners to build an electrical complex on James Bay. And where will most of the power be sold? In Quebec? In some other province? No, in New York. Simultaneoussy an even more eminent French Canadian is in Moscow hopefully building bridges of trade, culture and ideas between Russia and the West:

Private Enterprise in Russia

Meanwhile Russia, that invulnerable, self-contained, impervious bastion of pure Communism, has persuaded Italian private enterprisers to build its automobile industry and now suggests that the evil capitalistic entrepreneurs of Canada might be interested in similar projects (with Communist ceremonial trimmings, of course).

Or take the United States, where the world's most powerful economy should be immune to foreign meddlers and minor shocks. A few gnomes in Zurich and speculators in Bonn devalue the sacred American dollar overnight.

These, however, are relatively small chips on the stream of history. Something much larger is under way. A new and unique phenomenon, unknown until literally to revolutionize the business of policed now. the entire world. Against the march of this juggernaut the gestures on the political stage are merely pathetic.

Some four years ago George Ball, having resigned as American undersecretary of state, turned up in London to deliver a remarkable speech which should have shaken the British and all other governments. Next day I read all the London papers and could not find a line of reference to the speech. Mr. Ball was too old a hand in international politics and too scarred the battles of diplomacy to be surprised. He knew that governments would finally catch up with his warning against those corporate colossi that have no nationality, obey no national policy, move as they please between nations and already are richer, and more powerful, than many sovereign states.

Today Mr. Ball's predictions have been confirmed. economic writers of Newsweek suggests that within two decades at most the multinational corporations will own about 80 per cent of the world's corporate assets, dominate its trade and; by playing one nation off against another, will be able to defy all of them.

George Ball

Mr. Ball doesn't expect this to happen. He thinks that the nations will unite in passing joint laws, like the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, to recent years and now called the control the behavior of the colossi, as multinational corporation, has begun national corporations are controlled and Assuredly no single nation can seriously affect, much less control, them. Nor can a single nation control another With their usual time-lag, the world's new phenomenon, the developing multinational labor union which, quite predictnational corporation before it was well ably, is the workers' reaction to corporate giantism.

cosy symbiosis, one eventually able to parcel out the world's production and markets, the second to call international strikes and devastate the world's business.

This process is not a conspiracy by capital or labor. It is not the work of wicked men on either side. It is not the product of any ideology, capitalistic or communistic. It is the efficient machinery of production and consumption, the logical outcome of the technological revolution of which we have seen, so far, no more than the early phase.

Old-Fashioned Nationalism

Whatever comes of it, however the nations deal or fail to deal with it, this process, and many other aspects of the integrated world economy, make oldfashioned nationalism obsolete and unworkable. The actors mouth their lines on the stage. The business is settled silently in the box office.

Does this mean that nations also are becoming obsolete? In one sense they are. By historic standards, by economic necessity and by the threat of joint nuclear suicide they must surrender much of their old sovereignty or impoverish, if they do not destroy themselves. But by a different and perhaps more important measurement they can survive, prosper and deepen their own separate identities as essential parts of a greater whole

Or if they cannot distinguish the whole from its parts the real human drama, as distinguished from the stage show, must move toward a denouement foreseen long ago by Thomas Hobbes. Human civilization will be poor, nasty

There is no visible prospect that supplies for the North Vietnamese will he abruptly cut off. Neither Peking nor Moscow is that interested, as yet, in cultivating Washington.

That means time is no longer assuredly on Hanoi's side. She can no longer hold out until the Americans leave, confident of being able to deal with South Vietnam on better-than-even terms at that time. Her allies, too, may by then have reduced their commitment

That these and similar factors are being weighed and to a limited extent acted upon, is suggested by several moves Hanoi has made in recent weeks since the first American ping-pong players entered China April 10.

On April 30, in Paris, Hanoi a cease-fire throughout Laos, and made pecially in world affairs. They bring the insects that inhabit this type of country. In turn the insects will attract the song birds to the area, and, if you look up in the sky, it is possible you will see a red-tailed hawk soaring and country for its hunting ground.

If you watch and search you can find many kinds of plants and animals in the -mile's walk.

Breakthrough, Withdrawal

None of this represents a real breakthrough. Much of it is predicated on the public announcement of a firm date for total American withdrawal something which could have many implications, including the loss of much American influence over Saigon. An offer to discuss, even with predictions of early agreement, is not a commitment to act.

Nevertheless, in the semaphore of diplomacy, Hanoi has appeared to be indicating (a) increased interest in a settlement; (b) concern over the pros pect of a prolonged period in which residual American forces might stiffen the South Vietnamese more effectively than her own allies would stiffen her; and (c) worry about the balance military and diplomatic power during that "Vietnamized" phase of the war.

Add that the 1972 elections are increasingly impelling President Nixon toward compromise, and peace in Vietnam seems less chimerical now than it has been in a very long time. (Copyright, William R. Frye, 1911)

Soulless Silos Poison

For the Psyche

Do studies of rodent behavior point the way to human happiness, self-realization, family togetherness, a satisfactory sex life and better cities?

Can architects and city planners learn anything from Dr. John B. Calhoun's famous experiments with Norway rats and white mice? Do better cities, neighborhoods and homes, for that matter, have any influence on human behavior?

Sociologists, by and large, have until recently denied it. After studying a lot of studies designed to find out whether architectural and urban design affects the people who live in it Robert Gutman, for one, concluded that they "do not make a very compelling case" that better architecture somehow makes better people. with that.

This, of course, trks the architects and city planners and people like myself who prefer good design to bad design. In an age so hooked on scientific evidence — no matter how truly scientific - that we even need studies to assure us that sex is not only fun but also good for us, i would be nice to have some scientific assurance that slums are really bad.

But I am afraid I must agree with Mr. Gutman that most surveys of peoples' reactions to their environment "do not make a very compelling case." They are usually sponsored by the builders who think they have built good environments and they re-mind me of James Thurber's famous answer to the ques-tion: "How is your wife?" "Compared to what?"

Thurber replied.

After more than a century since western man began to worry about what industrial-tration was doing to his cities and only a little less time since "behavioral science" was invented, we still don't have any systematic approach to the study of the effect of cities on people

There has been more study about the different effects of smoking versus non-smoking, say, in terms of heart dis-ease; or the different effects of exercising versus sitting at home all day, in terms of life expectancy, than there has been of the difference of bad housing versus good housing in terms of - what?

We don't even quite know what it is that might wrong. So we argue about housing in terms of esthetics and status and personal preferences and none of these arguments are of much help to the designer. We regulate housing only in terms of fire codes, minimum health standards and property values, standards that also say nothing about human happiness, etc.

So the only guide we seen to have is the profit motive, a. ally short-sighted cost-benefit.

Battle against conformity the inspector-general, "the habitat cannot be considered as a simple physical shelter against bad weather." It is, the "osmotic envolope" for the family, the place that must bring about the osmosis from the savage to civilized mane The place to live must at once protect the family from external stress and help it adjust to and inegrate with the world around it.

Obviously slum housing impedes this function. But the new slums, says Dr. Haze-mann, are worse than the old. The new housing projects impose even more regulations, more "" mechanical bullying," and their giganticism forces people to struggle "in lost isolation in a life that is not really collective but anonymously monstrous.

Dr. Maximilian Piperek, the president of the Austran Society for Psychology, also says that "the soulless silos in which we house people poison their psyche." poison their psyche."
He studied 2,000 people of all kinds in Vienna recently in terms of what he calls "housing psychology" and also found that modern housing projects increased their logy.

The number of their residents who have difficulties concentrating increased by eleven per cent since 1950; the number of pathologically by nine per cent; the number of depressed persons in creased about five per cent.

Dr. Piperek found a demonstrable psychological need for style, beauty, color, comfort. he modern city.
In the light of all this, says individuality'

There are many more such The Yugoslavs particular, have done a good deal of work on the relation between mental health and They all tend to what esthetic and social critics, relying merely on observation and sense, have been saying all

But studies that say what seems obvious are, of course, suspect of being insufficiently 'scientific.' You can't run common sense through a computer and make a mortgage banker or civic engineer

And that is, I believe, why Dr. Calhoun's animal experi-ments have made such a profound impression on many city planners and others concerned with improving the urban habitat. Mice are so beautifully scientific! What Dr. Calhoun, a very serious scientist who works at the National Institute of Mental Health, in Bethesda, Md., has found among other things, is that rats and mice have most unfortunate tions to overcrowding. have most unfortunate reacotherwise well-planned en-vironment is increased, the animals become listless, withdrawn and anti-social. only their mental, but also their physical health breaks down to the point where they no longer bear children. But as Dr. Calhoun is the first to grant, mice are far from perfect models for men. Those of us who hate overcrowded housing projects, tenements and cities must be careful about applying Caltheory.

There is, to begin with, no lack of children in our over crowded slums and ghettos. Men, furthermore, are more adaptable than mice. Soldiers in their barand sailors in their for instance, suffer crowding without, hardship because their living space and their lives are rigidly or-ganized and because and they know they can get out find release of public and private diversions.

Even people we we had to endure the several downling of slave ships, in sons and concentration camps have not only survived but also recovered rapidly if they allowed their systems to adjust to the ordeal by accepting the situation. But again, what makes it possible to accept the situation is the hope of eventual freedom.

High density living in apartment houses or town house rows, in short, can be made tolerable by proper organization or design (noise control, for instance) and can be made healthy and agree-able if the lack of space within the home is compensated by a free choice of activities nearby.

The important thing is not how many people live on a square mile or acre, but what I i v ability — playgrounds, parks, cafes, entertainment etc. — the square mile or acre has to offer. The variety Dr. Piperek demands in housing design is really far more essential in the general environment in which the house choice of things for people to research psychologist con-cerned with "community en-vironmental management" for the U.S. Public Health Service, points out, "it is not overcrowding per se that creates problems, but over-crowding of activities and failure to provide activities outside the house." There must be separate facilities for small children, teenagers, and adults, he says, and such tension-relieving activities must be immediately avail-

Paul Hellyer isn't the first politician to lament the growth of big, complex, dehumanized govern-

It's been done so often that complaints and warnings about remote bureaucracies have lost whatever political impact they might have once had.

But Hellyer, in dropping out of the national Liberal party to form a political movement called Action Canada, sense that the time is ripe to launch yet another campaign on behalf of the "little people" who have lost control of government.

Who knows, Hellyer may even come up with a way of getting people into the action of political decision-making.

But, as the Trudeau Lib-erals have found, getting people into the action is a much harder job than it once might have been.

The drastic decline in pres tige of parliaments and leg islatures is a fundamenta cause of this problem. These traditional links between the people and the government have been grossly of matched in resources talent in their futile efforts to administrative arm of gov-

It is sadly not only fashionable but true to say that parliaments and legislatures are no longer where the real

The Trudeau approach to this problem, apparently, was to attempt to "plug" the people directly into the government, bypassing a frus-trated, inefficient parliament. was supposed to be

"participatory" democracy. But, as Hellyer has pointed out, the real decisions are still being made secretly by a power-wielders. "little man" hasn't been plugged into the action in any real way.

This modern-day frustration felt by MPs, MLAs and people throughout the country has been quietly accentuated by a mushrooming feature of recent years — the federalprovincial conference.

If it's difficult to get people involved in the action at the three main levels of gov ernment — federal, provincial and local — how in the world can we ever solve the prob-lem of a fourth and far less controllable level?

The constitutional con-ference here next month is the most immediately visible example of this fast-growing new level of political decision-making.

But it's only one of a multiplicity of federal-provincourse, that the amount of will decline sharply after the constitution of Can-ada is finally re-made and all the basic issues are settled.

But that's a mere hope based on the fairly slim possibility that the new constitution will be able to define air-tight jurisdictional com-partments for each level of government. The likelihood of continuing shared jurisdiction in many fields combined with the heavily regional quality of federalism will just grow and

It is possible, of course, to re-make the constitution to give the provinces and even municipalities a formal continuing voice in the opera-tion of the national govern-ment, thus cutting down the need for federal-provincial conferences.

But if this were limited to mild reforms such as allowing the provinces to appoint their own federal senators, it wouldn't do much to stem the growth of the fourth level of government.

* * * * In the meantime, who can blame the municipalities of Canada for their bare-faced effort to get formal recognition in the federal-provincial conference structure?

The municipalities know that's where all the really important action is going to take place for several years to come as an entire country has its powers carved up all over again to meet the needs of a new century.

Like 'it or not, Canada seems to be stuck with another form of government with infinite capacity to confuse and disturb the people

It all serves to emphasize the irony of a Paul Heliyer trying to get the little people into the federal action when in ultimate political terms the

But Hellyer can say that inflation, unemployment, wel-are, pollution, crime and all of his other priorities are no less important because the country happens to be on the brink of a constitutional over-

There is, however, one element in common between the graduate today and his predecessor of the dirty thirites. Many of them are emerging from formal higher education into a society which hasn't enough jobs to go around. For a number, posaround. For a number, pos-session of a degree will not by session of a degree win mony the "Open Sesame" it once appeared to be when em-ployers were scouring the universities for bright young men and women to recruit into their respective indus-

Another flashback to that earlier day conjures up the memory of a young man, highly gifted in English, who, on graduation found himself reduced to the unimaginative, prosaic job of dropping acid on metal in one of the menial processes at the Trail smelter. The job gave him subsistence. He remarked, a little ruefully at the time, that an ability, to quote Shake-speare's immortal lines didn't add much to his earning capacity at the smelter. The

My friend proceeded to graduate studies later and eventually progressed to senior position in the department of English at a large Canadian university, where his life has been satisfying and comfortable

It seems to me that his experience, with modifications rising from change, will be paralleled by a number of local and other Canadian students who participate in the baccalaureate ceremonies this week. And, to me, the full measure of their education will be expressed in their ability to overcome present difficulties to go on to constructive, purposeful lives that will bring them haplament "What good is my. degree?" They should realize that they are devaluing it. Those who figure it's a piece of parchment, representing the wastage of four or more years, may be rendering it worthless. Those who see it as evidence of the develop-ment of their capacities place a better valuation on it. Those who think it's the passport to easy living — the end of the educative process - are due for a helluva shock, unless they are particularly fortun-

It is my hope and belief that the great majority of graduates will recognize their degrees as evidence of time, effort and money well spent in self-development to help them meet the challenges of change. If their years of study have honed their intelli-gence to a sharper edge, the exercise has been entirely worthwhile.

It should help them to realize that they get from living what they put into it—often with gued interest. That is a few phat should be leave the comparative shelter of the lecture hall. was not too surprised to find what I have seen, heard and felt during these weeks in China that a great transformation is taking place because I saw reforms and changes during the first two years, after liberation from the rule of the Nationalists, which I did not think possible during the course of my during the course of my lifetime. There were, for example, such reforms as:

1. The end of civil war and the maintenance of law and order throughout China 10 end reign of terror by dis-ded troops, who had angmented the ranks of professional robbers and bandits.
2. The stabilization of currency to end the tragic inflation which had destroyed the morale of China's farmers, wage earners and salaried professionals.

5. - The re-education and employment for useful pur-poses of China's organized poses of China's organized Beggars, Yellow Ox and Teahouse gangs, terminating the activities of these para-sitic organizations which had continued to flourish under the Nationalists.

Any one of these reforms would have won the support of China's, people or any government capable of ending the devastating effect on China of former evils. It was in Nanking after liberation that the common people of China had accepted and were supporting the Peoples' Re-

In-stead, I have found factories throughout the areas which I have visited in which the Chinese without foreign aid are manufacturing what China needs most trucks, buses, railroad cars and locomotives for transportation. The backyard mass furnaces, which were ridiculed by many. observers of China sitting outside of this country, may have laid the foundation through trial and error for the present industrialization in almost every part of China. The increase in agricultural production is phenomenal. As our train rolled along the beautiful countryside of Kwangtung province in South China, I observed the condi-tion of the crops. China has made great progress in agri-culture, a greater progress in agriculture than I had reason to expect. The fields were extensive as compared to the small plots of former days and the yield of rice was such as I have never seen before Coming from Alberta, I have been interested in farming since I proved up a homestead in Valhalla. Grand Prairie, where I broke 50 acres of virgin land with four head of oxen. Seven of 10 Support CIC Campaign

Signatures on a petition urging Prime Minister Trudeau to stop foreign economic domination of Canada, domination of Canada, totalled 4,600 Friday, said Peter Kuzaan, chairman of the Victoria Committee for an Independent Canada.

On two major petition days, May 1 and May 22, 35 petitioners gathered the largest percentage of names, but some are still collecting names, he said.
"I have recently spoken to three Victoria high schools and they are very enthu-siastic. They believe Canada does have a future and they don't want to see Canada in American hands.

Kuzaan said there are 10 people in Belmont, Esquimalt and Elizabeth Fisher schools and Edizabeth Fisher schools petitioning now. They will hand the names in at a general meeting Monday at the University of Victoria. It will be held at Lansdown College cafeteria-lounge at 8

Kuzaan said an average of seven out of 10 people approached signed the the Victoria petitions will be sent to Trudeau to be presented with petitions from other parts of Canada early in June, Kuzaan said he thinks it's possible to get another 1,000 names before then.

YOUR TAXES ATLANTIC First Genuine 'People's' Court

By I. H. ASPER

Canada may be about to establish its first genuine "people's" court. That will be the result if Justice Minister John Turner's" hopes for the tax review board ma-

The bill to create the new taxpayers' court is well on its way through the parliamentary mill and the new board will likely be operational before the tax reform system is implemented this

The justice minister is basing his new tribunal on the Carter commission's recommendation that a new method must be found for settling disputes between the ordinary taxpayer and the government. It is well recognized that the present labyrinth of legal formalities and complex proceedings is partly responsible for many taxpayers being unwilling or financially unable to argue with revenue depart-

In 1946 the present Tax Appeal Board was established with the intent that it provide a simple, inexpensive and expedient method of providing an unhappy taxpayer with a forum in which his disagree-ment over his tax bill could be aired. Over the quarter-century of its existence the board has heard and disposed of many thousands of cases

But today, because it is bound to follow its previous rulings, and has developed a complex set of procedural rules, beyond the capacity of most ordinary people to fol-low, it resembles an austere court of law more than the informal and impartial d

mittee of arbitrators of putes over tax law application that was originally envisaged

The justice minister's solu tion is, in effect, to start over again. To signify the fresh start, the name is changed from the Tax Appeal Board to the Tax Review Board, pre-sumably to remove the court and legalistic image. Secondly, the board will now be answerable to the department of justice rather than

Since the board has been a wing of the tax department, it has been difficult to regard it as an impartial judge of the validity of the tax depart ment's actions in individual cases. Although appeal board members have, in fact, given impartial and objective rulings in tax cases, neverthe-less, the board's connection with one of the inevitable contestants, the tax office, has impaired its image.

As well, the new members of the review board will be treated like superior court judges, rather than government appointments will be treated like superior will be treated like superior will be treated like superior appointments will be treated to see [10].

Evidence Of Upsurge Still Lacking

With more than a third of the year gone, the Nixon admin-istration is still looking for 'solid evidence of a broad solid evidence of a broad economic upsurge that will drive down high unemploy-ment and slow inflation fur-dent Nixon that 1971 will be a good year, unemployment has hovered around the six-per-cent rate all year. In April, the jobless rate edged up to

Although consumer price increases slowed perceptibly in the first few months of the year, wholesale prices, which usually presage future cost-of-usually presage future cost-ofliving increases, accelerated in April.

And, the commerce de-partment reported, the rise in national personal income slackened in April, supplying new evidence the economic pace is failing to match the administration's forecasts.

The personal income ad-ance was $4,500 million, down from the $6,200 million increase recorded in February. The April rise was about the average monthly gain in 1970, a year in which the economy went through what Federal Reserve Chair-man Arthur F. Burns has called a recession.

COULD CUT TAXES

The evidence suggests, say some economic analysts, that the expansion Nixon is seeking is not moving fast enough to reduce unemployment and inflation to acceptable levels. The president has pledged to cut unemployment to 4.5 per cent and inflation, now running above five per cent, to three per cent by  the middle of 1972.

To achieve these goals, he has promised to stimulate the economy with stepped-up federal spending and easier money policies. If these fail to work, Nixon has said he will consider tax cuts later in the year to provide further stimulation.

There was an economic rebound from January through March but it can be traced to a catchup in business activity after settlement of the General Motors strike. The administration also said it signalled the beginning of a wider economic expansion. It pointed to in-creases in March retail sales and housing starts as evidence the consumer is start-ing to spend more. But so far, the expansion has not been strong enough to make a dent in the unemployment rate, which Nixon's economic officials say should be falling below five per cent by the end of the year.

permanence of appointment, it should be easier to attract the best and most qualified people to serve because the career risk and personal disruption is lessened. But more important, the

The security of tenure now offered should have a two-fold effect. Firstly, because of the board members who are called upon to judge the government's application of the often harsh tax laws, will no longer be dependent on government pleasure with their actions to guarantee the permanence and continuation of their positions. This itself should guarantee the removal of any subliminal pressures

One of the most worthwhile innovations in the new legisla-tion is that which provides that, other than the board chairman and vice-chairman, the members do not necessarily have to be lawyers Thus the way is paved for Turner to appoint accountants, businessmen and ordinary lawyers to adjudicate tax complaints at the grassroots

This characteristic, if properly applied, will go a great distance toward removing the ordinary taxpayer's reluc tance to argue his own case without having to hire costly professional help in a dispute with the tax collector.

The new legislation contains one other major advance toward a fairer tax system. It provides that if a taxpayer wins his argument before the review board, and if the tax involved is less than $1,000, then if the government appeals the board decision, the government will be bound to pay all of the taxpayer's expense of the appeal, regard-less of who wins the final round.

The necessity for such a provision has recently become self-evident. Often a taxpayer will have a dispute with the tax department involving only a few hundred dollars of tax, but involving a point of law which hasn't been hitherto considered by a tax court. The taxpayer may win his case but the revenue department may appeal the decision, not for the sake of collecting tax from him, but to establish a legal precedent which it can apply hundreds of similar cases. The unfortunate taxpayer in point-scoring is put to undue expense. Often he abandons his rights to save the legal expense. This provision protects him against becoming a guinea pig.

In defending the idea of his new and streamlined tax tribunal, the justice minister has told the House that he expects the review board to operate in an informal man-ner, free to disregard the ridigities and formalities of a normal legal court. Whether or not it succeeds in this worthwhile endeavor and brings an air of humanity to the experience the average taxpayer feels when disputing his income tax assessment, will depend to a large extent on the people Turner is able to attract to serve on the new

The experiment is important and can yield valuable results in removing the helplessness most taxpayers feel when faced with a disagreement with tax officials.

If the new tax review board truly becomes a "people's" court, it could be a major step forward in the important process of humanizing the relationship between the governed and governors.

The Genial Public Critic

hetween the journeyman critic — the public critic as Northrop Frye calls him in his formidable masterpiece Anatomy of Criticism, and the academic critic.

The academic critic is always tempted to analyse the work of literature as if it existed in vacuo, apart from life; this inclination was particularly strong among the New Critics who until very recently were so influential in our universities and who regarded the author's life and even his intentions in writing a poem or a book as irrelevant to the close, enrapt study of the text itself.

Frye's public critic, on the other hand, is more inclined to see the work in total context, relating it not only to the man who makes it; but also to the public that reads it

On this subject let me continue by quoting Frye, writing in The Anatomy of Criticism as one of the world's leading academic critics:
"It is the task of the public critic to exemplify how a man of taste uses and evaluates literature and thus show how literature is to be absorbed into society . . He has picked up his ideas from a pragmatic study of literature and does not create or enter into a literary structure.

This would be a fair portrait of such excellent practicing critics as Edmund Wilson and V. S. Pritchett, and I would ask for no better description of the course which I myself have followed. But Frye has always seemed to stand in awesome separation from such lowly practices, and I know "public critics" who regard him as the Enemy personified and see, in the formidable "intellectual apparatus he has built up to contain and categorize literature, a quintessential edition of acceptance. sential edifice of pedantry

The Bush Garden is the book that should spel such misconceptions, for here Frye himself appears as nothing more formidable than an acute and rather genial public critic

In the intervals of theorizing on the general characteristics of literature and producing brilliant studies of past writers as varied as Milton, Shakespeare and Blake Frye has not neglected the literature of his own country, and The Bush Garden is in fact a series of his essays and reviews on Canadian writers and writing produced at intervals over the past quarter of a century

The first half consists of the best portions of the annual surveys of Canadian poetry which Frye contributed for a decade to the University of Toronto Quarterly. The rest is made up of miscellaneous articles on Canadian writers and painters, and, right at the end, a brilliant analytical survey of the relations between literature and society in Canada which Frye wrote some years ago as the Conclusion to the Literary History of developing progress of writing in Canada, it becomes evident that he is really fulfilling all but one of the specifications for a public critic which he laid down in The Anatomy of Criticism. He shows how a man of taste "uses ... literature." He ...shows how literature is absorbed into society; he goes further and shows how it emerges from it.

As one reads the essays with a growing awareness of Frye's sensitivity to the

The one thing he refuses to do is for evaluate, to assess and compare degrees of "greatness," and here, by applying what to him is a necessary rule for the academic critic, he is in fact showing himself an effective public critic in peculiarly Canadian

For in practice the exercise of evaluating books, of comparing them with the best the language has produced, is a hopeless task in a country like Canada whose literature is young and still only in the process of use Frye's own pungent phrase: "If evaluation is one's guiding principle, criti-cism of Canadian literature would become only a debunking project..." But if Frye's critical conscience and — I suspect—his personal kindliness, debar him, from debunk-ber, they also debug by ing, they also debar him from the kind of-idiotic inflation of the claims of Canadian' writing which has so often marred what in this country passes for criticism.

In a situation like that in Canada, what the critic really has to ho is to act as the mediator between the writer and society, and this idea Frye is constantly repeating in his notes on specific Canadian poets?

Contrary to some legends about him which have credited him with being the spiritual father of a whole school of mythobsessed poets, Frye claims that critical encouragement cannot bring a literature into

But it can help to keep it going once it exists and the poet can best he assisted by judging his work according to the standards that are proper to it. These standards Inevitably have reference to the time and place in which the work is produced, and in dealing with Canadian writers Frye has deliberately avoided the comparative approach.

"I have considered the question care fully," he tells us, "and my decision, while it may have been wrong, was deliberate. I have for the most part discussed Canadian poets as though no other contemporary poetry was on the first instance in the context of the local culture within which it arises. But I do not think we can ignore the larger unity a language creates. language creates.

We cannot stop influences from Britain, France and the United States crossing the oceans and the borders, and we cannot avoid seeing Canadian writing in relation to other writing in English or French, even if we may legitimately avoid the kind of pointless comparisons that might attempt to pit Earle Birney against Shakespeare or Cohen against Keats.

But it is a critic's practice rather than his But it is a critic's practice rather than his theories that shows the sensitivity to the nuances of writing which is his one indispensible possession, and here we have no doubt of Frye's validity. I could quote for a column' the clear, condensed passages in which he records his salient insights into the virtues of a whole generation of Canadian poets but I prefer to ask you to of Canadian poets, but I prefer to ask you to take my word for it and read the book

This novel is certainly bang on target as regards the troubles of the present university system, particularly in England where hypocrisies of power of society is too individualiste to be typical, and his solution to the moral problems he sparks off are often too glib. For instance, at the end of this book, justice it is is meted out to the characters in cavalier fashion. Such amused tolerance may in fact be the hallmark of contemporary society, but it also means that Raven shies away from exploring the issues as fully as For the present, though, it is hard not to be captivated by

But now, disillusionment with the rock scene has spread far and wide, Rock performers have turned money mad?

The deaths of some prominent rock stars and the ecology movement's call for purity have turned many young people off drugs, and the music itself is undergoing drastic alterations.

The recent announcement by 41-year-old rock impre-Bill Graham that he would close his two emporia of live music, Fillmore East in New York and Fillmore West in San Francisco, was seen as heralding an end of an era in rock.

The groups who once were willing to brave the rain and mud of Woodstock to play, had turned, Graham says, into highly structured corporations demanding higher and higher payments for their

An improvisational acting group, Company I has estab-lished a two-fold target.

In the first instance it is their intention to attempt to fulfill the needs of particular groups in the area — specifi-cally churches and high schools — and to give work-shops for these groups.

Both the events and the workshops are designed to show the possibilities of using new and inexpensive tech-niques for the development of dramatic materials related to the religious needs of the church groups and the educational needs of the schools.

Strong support for the project has been expressed by such community organizations as the Victoria Council of Greater School Drama Festival Committee and Association of B.C. Drama Educators.

Second part of the endeavor is aimed at permitting the continued growth and development of the students them-selves who compose the group. Company I, it should be noted, is however in no way related to Uvic's Theatre

Emily Carr Never Stopped Growing

Carr in galleries, and institutions has caused a myth to be built around this artist. But to explain her excellent work by elevating her to a status beyond the human is a mistake. Such an explanation is too easy.

At the public gallery in Vancouver there is an Emily Carr exhibition that is the most comprehensive ever assembled. The value of this show is in walking from painting to painting and seeing the history of her progress toward uniqueness. Her distinctiveness was no accident; she willed it. Leav-ing a trail of paintings behind her, she kept learning, discovering, when at any point in her career she could have relaxed and still have made acceptable paintings. Her task skill and radical vision. By 1928 she reduced an Indian village to a few dahs of paint while surrounding trees became huge cathedrals built with a dark expression-ism which blots out the sky. Citzenship papers are un-necessary to identify with this imagery; it is universal.

She lived on the west coast and loved the landscape's distinctive character. However, as a painter in a land that had yet to see a developed art tradition beyond ritualistic Indian art, she had to borrow heavily from new European painting. Emily Carr studied on the continent. Paintings like Canal in Britain, made during her tour in 1911, are good copies of Cezanne's early style

On her return, two paintings dated 1912 of totem poles at Skidegate are also in the manner of Cezanne. She was to remake these two paintings 30 years later in 1942 at the height of her maturity. The difference between the early and later renderings proves Emily Carr's ability to sur-pass her origins.

She borrowed from Vincent Van Gogh. One painting, en-titled Above a Gravel Pit swirls with brush built line ties. Brush strokes roll sky and plow the ground into a sea of energy. result is not the self-conscious eclecticism of the Cezanne like paintings, but the Emily surface electricity that flick-ers like the sun is a heavy feel for the volumetric that

At the invitation of the Soviet government, the Rt. Hon.
Plerre Elliott Trudeau, prime minister of Canada, and Mrs.
Trudeau paid an official visit to the Script United to the Soviet Union from May 17-28, 1971.

During their stay in the Soviet Union, Mr. Trudeau and his party held official discussions in Moscow and visited Kiev, Tashkent, Samarkand, Norilsk, Murmansk and Leningrad. They were thus able to acquaint themselves with the life and work of the Soviet people and many of the achievements of the U.S.S.R. in the economic, scientific and officials. On the Soviet side: Deputy Chairmen of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. N. K. Baibakov, V. A. Kiril-lin, V. N. Novikov; U.S.S.R. Minister of Foreign Affairs A. A. Gromyko, U.S.S.R. Min-ister of Foreign Trade, N. S. Patolichev, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs of the U.S.S.R. S. P. Kosyrev, U.S.S.R. Ambassador to Can-ada B. P. Miroshnichenko and also, heads of departments of the U.S.S.R. ministry of for-eign affairs E. N. Makeev, O. N. Khlestov, Y. N. Cherni-akov and other officials.

Talks Cordial

The discussions were held in an atmosphere of frankness and cordiality and provided the opportunity for a useful exchange of views on the present state and future prospects of Canadian Soviet rela-tions as well as on major international problems of com-mon interest. The Canadian side outlined the basic aims of Canadian foreign policy, while the Soviet side outlined the decisions of the 24th Congress of the SPSU on questions of foreign policy. They agreed that all countries, regardless of their social systems, should seek to develop relations based on reciprocity and mutual confidence and should re-satisfaction with the general trend towards improvement of Canadian - Soviet relations. They are convinced that the further development of goodneighborly relations corresponds to the national interests of the peoples of Canada and the Soviet Union and promotes the relaxation of inter-national tension and the safeguarding of universal peace. With this in mind the prime minister of Canada and the chairman of the U.S.S.R. council of ministers signed a protocol designed to enlarge and deepen consultations on important international prob lems of mutual interest and on questions of bilateral relations by means of periodic meetings.

The two sides emphasized the importance of contacts at all levels and expressed their mutual desire to develop exchanges of visits of govern-ment and political leaders, representatives of commerce. science and technology, cul-ture, non-governmental organizations and tourists.

Review Prospects

The two sides reviewed the present state and future pros-pects of economic, scientific and technological co-operation between the two countries. The two governments agreed that there are favorable op-portunities for increasing and diversifying trade in both directions to mutual advan-tage. They noted that Canadian-Soviet trade over the years has been fruitful and that the deliveries of Canadian wheat play an important part in this trade. They instructed the appropriate agencies to work out proposals on ways of further developing trade relations between the two countries. It was agreed that negotiations for the renewal of the current trade agreement should begin in November or December this year in Moscow.

They also agreed to instruct the appropriate agencies to study the possibilities of fur-ther expanding co-operation in the field of air transport.

It was noted that the expansion of mutually advantageous economic, scientific and technological relations has been promoted by the agreement netween the governments of Canada and the U.S.S.R. on Canada and the U.S.S.R. on co-operation in the industrial application of science and technology, signed on Jan. 27, 1971. The two sides agreed to render all possible assistance in the active implementation of the programs undertaken within the framework of the mixed Canadian-Soviet com-mission on co-operation set up pursuant to that agreement.

The Soviet side proposed that consideration should be given to the conclusion of a trkeaty covering economic development, technological and industrial co-operation. The Canadian side agreed to study the proposal.

North Discussed

Taking into account the fact that the Arctic regions, distin-guished by their particularly severe climatic and ice conditions, are of great importance to both Canada and the Soviet Union, the two sides discussed the possibilities of promoting co-operation in developing the northern territories and agreed to expand the exchange of experience in this field between Canada and the U.S.S.R. Both sides shared the view that they have special responsibilities and corresponding rights with respect to ensuring the safety of navi-gation and preserving the nat-ural balance in the Arctic re-

During the exchange of views on major international problems, the governments of Canada and the Soviet union confirmed their desire to con-tinue efforts to strengthen universal peace and reduce inter-national tension. Want Conference

Canada and the U.S.S.R. believe that detente and stabil-ity in Europe would be pro-moted by the convening of a properly prepared conference on European security and co-operation with the participa-tion of all European states, Canada and the United States. They consider it useful to con-tinue consultations with each other on this question.

The two sides expressed their conviction that the strengthening of international security and the safeguarding of universal peace are impor-tant objectives to be pursued, in particular through appropriate measures of disarma-duction of armed forces and armaments in areas where the military confrontation is particularly dangerous, and especially in central Europe. They discussed the recent proposals made by the secretary-general of the central committee of the CPSU, L. I. Brezhnev before the 24th CPSU Congress and in Tbilisi for various measures of disarmament as well as the Canadian suggestion placed be-fore the conference of the Committee on disarmament regarding underground nu-clear testing. The prime min-ister of Canada outlined also the considerations in favor of a mutual and balanced reduction of forces. He welcomed the recent initiative of the U.S.S.R. and other socialist countries for a convention eration of nuclear weapons and both parties expressed the hope that a convention could be concluded this year. The two sides expressed their satisfaction at the conclusior of the treaty on the non-proliferation of niclear weapons and the treaty on the prohibi-tion of the emplacement of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction on the seabed and the ocean

Water Safety Week Starts Sunday

The dangers—as well as the pleasures—of water sports will be put under the spotlight Sunday to June 5, declared by the Canadian Red Cross as Water Safety Work Water Safety Week.

Harry Finch, field supervisor of the Red Cross Water Safety Service, warns that about 180 people are drowned British Columbia each

To point up measures that should be taken to prevent tragedy, water safety displays will be shown Saturday and Sunday at the Oak Bay Tea Party. Similar displays will be held all week at the Simpson-Sears Hillside boat

Finch suggests that regis-tration at one of Greater Victoria's three swimming pools for swimming and life-saving classes is a good investment—both for pleasure

Working out of Red Cross headquarters, 1046 Fort, Finch will be travelling as far north as Nanaimo to visit summer swim programs. Part of his duties will include training swim instruc-tors, lifeguards, and examin-ing candidates at all levels of aquatics.

Part of the Water Safety

Part of the Water Safety Week program is a poster contest with prizes for three divisions: One, 10 years and younger; Two, 11 years and older; Three, handicapped and disabled children.
The posters will not be restricted in size and may be restricted in plack and painted, colored, in black and white, or be cut-outs.

Riders Trapped

NEW YORK (AP) — Eight thousand rush-hour subway riders were trapped in a tunnel under the East River for nearly two hours when a short circuit stopped five trains and sent smoke pouring into crowded cars. One women died of a heart attack and many other passengers fainted. More than 100 paswere treated for inhalation and heat ion. Thirty-four per-

OLDER KIDS GET OUT EARLIER

School this year, officially ends June 24, the day all students are issued with a final report card.

But the older you are, the sooner you get out, according to a department of education circular specifying student release dates.

Students from Grades 1 to 6 have to stay in school right up to the 24th. Those in Grades 7 to 10 must attend up to June 18, and those in Grades 11 and 12 must attend until June 11 until June 11.

Education department exams will be written from June 14th to 17. Scholarship exams rün from June 18 to 24.

Skillings Has Run-In

Waldo Skillings has had his tical run-ins over the years.

But Monday the run-in was somewhat different. City police report the trade and industry minister was driving a car that collided with a telephone pole at Quamichan and Redfern.

Police said the 64-year-old Skillings was driving west on Quamichan about 4 p.m. Monday when the accident

Police report there was $700 damage to the govern-ment vehicle and none to the reported hurt.

Though he may admit he's snoopy, a private investigator hates being called a "snoop.

"There's a lot more to it evidence han that," says John convince says John McArthur, a Victoria private investigator.

Tracking people has been McArthur's business for the past nine years. Ninety percent of his work is divorce cases, with a smattering of credit checks and "hippie hunts," i.e. looking for runaway kids.

Divorce work entails prov-ing adultery. Though it's not necessary to catch the parties involved in the act, the private investigator must col-evidence to convince a judge that adultery took place.

And just what kind would suffice to convince a judge? "Hearing voices in the bedroom and creaking bed springs would be a bout the minimum," answered McArthur.

It costs $250 or more to prove a spouse adulterous. A prospective client signs a "semi-contract" granting per-mission to investigate and stating the description and habits of the spouse and if possible of the other party involved. If the information circumstantial given is incorrect, the private around 8 and wait for an hour. If she comes out I follow; if not, I go to another case. I can often tell where she's going by the way she's dressed — lancy dress means dancing at some nightclub and casual clothes bowling.

"Tailing her, I find she meets a man and they go into a show. I make a shote of the car's license number, and where it's parked, and go work another case. Two hours later, when the show is over I come back and wait for them to come out.'

In nine years McArthur has never lost a case or had anybody take a swing at him, although he has come pretty ciose to it. Once he had a particularly good view of the antics of a couple in the livingroom. Unfortunately a street light gave the couple an

The biggest beef of private investigator is that his licence gives him no more rights than anybody else, said McArthur. Though he may walk up to the front and back door of a house along the sidewalk, it is against the law to prowi-around.

But 'There's a Lot More to It Than That'

McArthur said that he doesn't want to invade some-one else's privacy, but a private investigator should have the right to, if it will get him evidence that will stand up in court. "Sure it's sneaky, to follow someone, but d'm only doing it because they're doing what they're not supposed to," he added. "A person has the right to know where and what challenging. It's always changing and there's a certain thrill in doing a good job.

So far he has only been taken to court once for invading personal privacy. He lost the first round in the B.C. Supreme Court, not on the count of privacy invasion, but for "over-indulgence in tail-ing." The plaintiff claimed that being followed so wore ake tranquilizers. The

Trevino Takes a Shine To 'Poor Man's Grass'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - Lee Trevino had just fired a second consecutive 66 to take the lead in the $175,000 Danny Thomas Memphis Golf Classic and was talking about, of all things, grass.

"I like these Bermuda grass greens," Trevino said Friday.
"It's poor-man's grass and that's what I grew up on."

Trevino's 36-hole total of 132, eight-under par on the friendly little Colonial Country Club course, gave him a one-lead over first-round Volatile Hill Files Larry Ziegler, who had to rally for a 71 and 133.

ZUT! 7 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. More nonsense from Vancouver... the gang par-ticipates in sketches including an interview with the prime minister about his home life, a demonstration of the new French-Canadian curve ball and a short-sighted doctor with a short-sighted patient.

GLEN CAMPBELL, 7 p.m. Channel 8 (rerun). The king of country music, Johnny Cash, and his wife June Carter are among the guests. Others who will visit Glen are Bob Newhart and singer Jackie De Shannon. New-hart's monologue as general hart's monologue as general store owner taking an order from Noah for supplies for the Ark is priceless. Johnny Cash and his wife sing "Help Me Make It Through the Night," and then Johnny and Glen team for "Understand Your Man." Miss De Shannon offers the Beatles' last big. offers the Beatles' last big hit, "Let It Be."

WELK SHOW, 7:30 p.m., Channel 4 (rerun). Musical attention turns to some of the eal old goodies, such as 'When My Baby Smiles at 'Me,' "All Through the Day," "Them There Eyes," "Me and My Shadow" and "I Got Rhythm" among them. Guest singers are Anita Bryant, featuring the hymn "Abide with Me" and country star Lynn Anderson, who offers recent hit "Rose Garden."

M I S SION - IMPOSSIBLE. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7 (rerun). The group forsakes the in-ternational scene to try to straighten out again for the governor, and hires a pro to stage a phony protest. Then he tries to put one of his cronies into the governor's

SATURDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5 (rerun). "Lady L." (1966). Starring Sophia Loren. (1966). Starring Sophia Loren, Paul Newman and David Niven, and written ind directed by Peter Ustinov, who also shows up in a bit part as a bungling, inept leader. It's lavish and at times hilarious. But it lacks a cohesive force and the comedy does not sustain itself. Sophia is a laundress in Paris who falls in love with anarchist Paul Newman, who robs banks and rich people to give to the poor. She helps him in his harassments against society, then meets a wealthy aristo-crat, David Niven, and mar-ries him, but Paul remains INDIANAPOLIS 500. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. A delayed telecast of the most famous of all auto races. The race will be run earlier in the day, but to present it to the home audience for the first time in its history, a five-hour delay was specified.

MY THREE SONS. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12 (rerun). What a way to spend a honeymoon! First, Chip and Polly are stymied by their stalled car. So they have to brave a storm and walk the rest of the way to the hotel. When they arrive, they are chagrined to discover that the hotel has changed its policy, and now it caters only to

FAME, FORTUNE HAVEN'T CHANGED HER

Anne Still Springhill Girl

TORONTO — It's been quite a year for Anne Mur-ray. In less than 12 months she's had a million record seller, been named best fevocalist of 1970, been male vocalist of 1970, been nominated for a Grammy Award, been offered a Holly-wood film contract, and her name is now a guarantee of sure-fire box-office success at concerts across the country.

But golly-gee, no kidding, cross my heart and every-thing. Anne really hasn't changed. Despite the drastic alteration in her status as an entertainer, all the thousands kind words and lines ken about the blonde from lines Springhill remain true, and her humor, her warmth, and her frankness, continue to audiences in both Canada and the U.S.

All the elements of Anne's naturalness as an entertainer will be contained in her last CBC-TV music special of the season. Entitled Bring Back The Love, it's set for telecast Tuesday at 8 p.m. on the full CBC-TV network in color. Channels 2 and 6.)

The show is both an affectionate look back at the past hectic year, and a glimpse into the future, with Anne in some different television situations including one of her own favorites — a heart-warming children's concert, complete with lollipops, that should make half the adults in Canada sing along with the ten-year-olds.

The title song for the show, Bring Back The Love, has just been written by Brent Titcomb, who also wrote Sing Sing Low for Anne He'll be featured in a solo of the title tune and doing another of his compositions, Sycamore Slick.

Also supporting Anne will he the new vocal group Dr. Music, who have backed Anne claims he has seen a flying saucer land in his pasture; A Case for the Defence, about a conflict between a fellow MP

Bit of Humor GALLUP POLL

Convocation

In these days of internal strife at the University of Victoria a bit of humor can go a long way.

Members of the student steering committee of the Alma Mater Society have come up with a statement on the convocation ceremony which takes place today at the Memorial Arena.

"We are happy that the university has recognized the seriousness of convocation and has taken steps to ensure a modicum of professionalism during the ceremonies by acquiring a talented and experienced veteran of staged productions from Baltimore, who will wear the robes that university presidents would customarily wear "at ceremonies of this type.

"We are given to under-stand that he will also do a 'stand-up monologue' in the best show business tradition, to start things off.

"Unfortunately, this on-stage production may well be the last for this visiting talent, as we understand the sponsors are unhappy with the type of tragi-comic theme usually portrayed by this lead. It is clear even at this point that there will be fewer autograph-seekers than ever

At University Immigration Still Unwanted Here

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

The past decade, with all its upheavals, has made no change in Canadian views or whether or not this country needs immigrants. Today, as in 1960, two-thirds of the people do not want immigration here, as compared to about one-fourth of the nation who do.

While the Maritimes and the West are the least enthusiastic about immigration, the opinion that we do not need it at this time is matched closely throughout the country. Those in skilled and unskilled labor object most strongly with 70 care and the country. strongly with 70 per cent say "No," as compared to 57 per cent of those who are in managerial or professional ranks.

The big majority of those who think we do not need immigration at this time, name the unemployment situation as the basic reason. Others claim that we have enough population now, and that until we can look after our own people, we should not admit more.

On the other hand, the one-fourth of the nation who holds that we should have more immigrants, does so, because of the need to build up population. "We have so much land, and so many opportunities" they say. "And we must develop our resources. We have lots of room in an empty country."

Others believe that Canada needs immigrants with special training, that they stimulate the economy, and bring new ideas and new cultures with them.

"Would you say that Canada needs immigrants, or does not need immigrants?"

Here's how the public reacts, nationally, regionally, and the main occupational groups.

Pick Berries at Peak of Perfection

By JACK BEASTALL

Some of the finest small fruits to grow in the home garden are found among the group of plants known as

Included are blackberries, and some cultivated hybrids named after their propaga-tors, such as Logan's-berry, Boysen's-berry and so forth.

The fresh fruits of these are rarely seen in stores for several reasons. The first is eye-appeal, which is closely linked with flavor. *

Flavor depends on sugar content of the berries, and this increases rapidly during the last 24 to 48 hours before away from the stems.

While it is easy to pick at this peak of perfection, the fully-ripened fruit cannot be shipped without tending to squash, thus losing eye-appeal which is so important in today's marketing.

To have eye-appeal on display the fruits must be picked before they become soft, before the sugar content has built up. The result is nice-looking berries, sour, and Once bitten by the sour taste, the housewife does not rush back for more so the produce manager of the supermarket concludes "there is no demand for those kinds of berries.

Tips for The Home Gardener problem is to determine when a berry is ready to pick, and that resolves into no problem once you know how.

When the herries are ready to pick they come away from the stem at the lightest touch, and the art is to pick without squashing.

The mehod, taught me by a veteran berry-grower years ago, is easier demonstrate than describe.

GENTLE SUPPORT

The first finger of the right hand (if you are right-handed) goes beneath the berry, supporting it gently near its base. The palm of the hand is slightly cupped to catch the berry when it drops Sow beets in little furrows with slight thumb pressure

Depending on the size of the berries and the size of your Never allow seedlings to hand, six to 10 fruits can be flipped off in quick suc-cession. If a fruit does not release easily, leave it until tomorrow; it is not quite at dry out. Water gently in slight depressions alongside rows. See that all newly-planted the peak of perfection.

You will hear folks say they love blackberries or boysens, but the plants take over the whole garden and become a tangle. The same could be said of children who have not been trained.

The greatest mistake any gardener can make is to plant bramble fruits along a fence or in a back corner. In these positions it is impossible to get all around the plants for training and picking, theretangle of sucker growths and seedlings.

For good fruit, and plenty of it, grow your brambles on a three-wire trellis as a divider across (or lengthwise of) the garden. Any growth that gets out of hand is soon "in your hair," literally and figuratively, and will receive immediate attention.

To obtain large fruits without objectionable hard seeds two things are needed; limit the plants to the minimum of canes and supply plenty of water to the roots from the time the first flower petals drop. A soil full of humus will hold the moisture.

Four canes, eight to 10 feet long, are ample for each blackberry root, and six canes to a root of the hybrid berries.

Since you are limiting the number of canes to be trained there is no sense in allowing the fruiting canes to be smothered by new canes that will bear next year's fruits.

Right now is the time to select canes for next year saving two more than the actual number needed (to allow for damage) and cut-ting out just below soil level all other growths, and any that appear later in the

Two blackberries and two logans have supplied 20 boxes of herries three times a week jelly, and sealers (in those days) for winter, and all the fresh fruit three people could

Ceremonial Challenge For Scottish

The Canadian Scottish Regiment's freedom of the city will be formally chal-lenged by Mayor Courtney Haddock when they march through Victoria with hayonets fixed Saturday, June

The regiment's (Princess Mary's) freedom was granted in 1954 and has only been challenged once since.

The ceremony will take place in front of the Empress after the regiment begins marching from the Bay Street Armouries at 2:30 p.m., led by the regimental band and a olor party.

As the marchers reach the Causeway, Haddock, city clerk Moran Waller, police Chief Jack Gregory and four constables will step onto the street and challenge the sol-

Protect your lawn, shrubs, flowers, fruits and vegetables

Available in liquid concentrate, granular or pressurized spray, wherever fine

An overall application of Killex is a pretty sure bet to wipe out weed in your lawn – including the tough ones that resist 2,4-D weed killers. But once in a while a pesky weed or two will manage to sneak back into your lawn. In which case you bring out the Killex Aerosol Spot Weeder and psssst — end of comeback. Killex has a triple action that kills dandelions, chickweed, clover and most m weeds. It's guaranteed to work, too. By the Green Cross people. Or your money back,

One of the most important things about feeding your vegetables is to use a balanced fertilizer. One of the best balances for steady growth and quality is the 12-18-9 formula of Green Cross Lightweight Flower, Shrub & Tree Food. But for quick results you may prefer to use a 'level formula' 20-20-20 Water-Soluble Plant Food. A few other hints:

For Insects and Diseases—Dust regularly with Multi-Purpose Flower and Vegetable Dust. Ideal for most vegetables.

For Insects Only — Garden Guard containing rotenone is an effective treatment which can be used right up to harvest time for many beetles, caterpillars and aphids.

For Tomatoes—Use Tomato

Early Warning System-$750

Finning introduces Scientific Wear Analysis — an early warning system that signals future internal failures or problems with your Caterpillar equipment. By analyzing the metals content in used oil, Scientific Wear Analysis can save you thousands of dollars in machine downtime and repairs. And for only $7.50 per analysis! Scientific Wear Analysis locates, identifies and measures minute particles of worn metal in used oil. The type and number of particles indicate how equipment components are wearing. Careful interpretation shows whether your Cat equipment is in normal operating condition or, conversely, whether future failures of problems are suspected. Finning is the first equipment dealer to install a wear analysis normal operating condition or, conversely, whether future failures or problems are suspected. Finning is the first equipment dealer to install a wear analysis lab. And the big advantage Finning's Scientific Wear Analysis gives you is that test results are interpreted by technicians who are totally familiar with Cat machines, their service history and application throughout B.C. All reports and recommendations are made with this background of experience and know how. Scientific Wear Analysis has many benefits. You save money and time. You can make inexpensive minor repairs before they become costly rebuilds. You can schedule repairs or overhauls without disrupting production. Machine availability increases, downtime decreases. Besides monitoring component wear, tests will reveal coolant leaks, dirty filters and fuel dilution. At $7.50 per oil sample, Scientific Wear Analysis is a maintenance procedure you shouldn't be without. The specialist in human allergies, often gets in a rut about pets. For many allergists, the standard, first question asked a person sufquestion asked a person sui-fering from an allergy is: "Do you own a pet?" If so, before long the doctor is likely to be telling the patient the pet must go before the allergy can be cleared.

The result in thousands of homes across the country yearly is that the pets finally do "go". Some are given away, many are put to sleep. Unfortunately, the sacrifice owner often do not solve the allergy problem, simply because, in those instances, the pet is found not to be the cause, after all. The parting family and the cause of the of pet and people was for naught.

not all allergists, by any means, make this offhand judgment in treating an al-lergy, but far too many do. Should this situation occur in your family, I'd recommend you board out the accused pet for several weeks during which time you thoroughly clean up hair and dander that may be left in the house.

* * * DEAR DR. MILLER: My cousin Regina's red-eared turtle opens up his mouth occasionally but otherwise appears healthy. Does this mean he's sick? - T.D.

DEAR T.D.: Healthy turtles open their mouths for several good reasons. One, when they are hungry. Two, if they are felling sort of snappish. Or three, and considerably less frequently, when they are in-the mood for a good yawn. A sick turtle, especially one suffering from pneumonia, will tend to open his mouth most of the time as he gasps for air. This poor, raspy reptilian wouldn't eat nor probably even move except for this comparatively frequent and frantic attempt to gulp in more air

CHESS MASTER

By International Chess Master PROBLEM By B. Zappas, Greece

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

HINTS FOR BEGINNERS There are two styles of development; the attacking and the defensive. In one the pieces are spread about to secure the greatest possible command of the board. In the other they are kept together mutually supporting or de-fending each other. Whichever method is adopted, the player should be prepared to change from one to the other at short notice, that is unless he sees a certain win by the first

Long Skirts Had OVERNIGHT One Advantage

There are women in Victoria now who can teil about the trials and tribulations of the tomboy type who happened to like sports in an age before special sports clothes were seriously considered.

Trying to swim in a balloon-like costume with knickers and stockings was next to impossible, but there were other begands.

were other hazards.

Chasing a tennis hall in a long skirt wasn't easy. The gentlemen who cared about a fast game left the ladies to their own style, or slowed their pace accordingly.

Cyclists developed their own techniques for keeping skirts out of spokes, and croquet players continued in their usual dignified way.

Gradually it occurred to women and designers that for some sports such as riding trousers really were

Gradually it occurred to women and designers that for some sports, such as riding, trousers really were more practical, even if they weren't quite lady-like.

But it wasn't until the 30s that slacks were accepted by great numbers of women, and shorts replaced skirts for tennis and other sports.

Most women are grateful for the change but a Victorian recalls one great advantage of long skirts for a sport she played at school.

In a wild game of grass hockey, you can't beat a long skirt for stopping the ball before it gets near the goal posts.

Lawyers Want Legal Aid Office

The Victoria Bar Associa-tion favors a full-time Legal Aid office to improve handling of an accelerating number of cases.

At the moment local lawyers volunteer their time to conduct legal aid programs Wednesday evenings and one or more neighborhood free legal clinics most Monday

But members at their annual meeting this week called for a small central office with a paid staff which would be available almost anytime to provide bette direction and administration

Past president Kennet Murphy said today it's hoped help to establish such an office can be obtained from the Legal Aid Society in Vancouver where such a program is already under Louis Lindholm, the newly-elected president, said the local association's executive has been instructed to find out if provincial or federal funds can be made available for such an office.

He added that it is the view of the association that the province must radically accelerate its legal aid pro gram. Lawyers cannot be expected to carry what is essential a public service to which the whole community should contribute.

provincial highways July 1.

The limit for single axles will go from 18,000 to 20,000 pounds and for conventional tandem axles, from 32,000 to 25,000 pounds. 35,000 pounds.

The changes result from review of regulations by the highways and comercial transport departments.

Minimum horsepower and drive axle requirements have been established to ensure that vehicles taking advan-tage of the increased weight allowance will have adequate tractive power, the depart-ments announced.

A scale of allowable weights A scale of allowable weights based on distance between groups of axles has been established. The scale ranges from 35,000 pounds for axles four feet apart to 59,000 pounds for axles 28 feet apart on a vehicle or group of vehicles.

The current system of calculating gross vehicle weight on a wheelbase factor will be abandoned.

The revised regulations will immediately exempt vehicles under 12,000 pounds gross weight from reporting to commercial transport depart-

MPs Question Census

OTTAWA (CP) — Census-takers will not be spending time on the doorstep next week waiting for husbands and wives to settle just who is to be listed as head of the household.

For the purposes of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, it will be the man.

The issue has been one of-many raised by MPs as census operations get into full swing.

Grace MacInnis (NDP Vancouver-Kingsway) pro-tested in the Commons Fri-day that the automatic listing of husbands as the head of the household will be unfair to many women.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc

Pepin, responsible for the DBS, said the procedure has its shortcomings but the bureau "has to go by appearances."

Other problems raised later at a meeting between MPs and DBS officials included the decision taken by close to 20 people on the Six Nations. Indian reserve at Brantford, Ont., not to participate in census because they do not feel they are Canadian citizens.

Census director W. D. Porter said co-operation now has been assured through a visit by officials who explained the advantage to the group of being included in the census. The need for a variety of social services is calculated from census.

"We would record them as .Canadian-born anyway," he Charles Caccia (L Teronto-Davenport) with a large number of Italian-born Canadians in his riding, was concerned about measures to enable people to answer census questions in other languages.

Mr. Porter assured him interpreters will be available on demand.

Here's a new "first" in world cruising. A cruise that sails from San Francisco and follows an entirely different routing around the world, avoiding Europe completely and taking in the most interesting ports of call in the Pacific, Australasia, the African and South American continents. But we're getting ahead of ourselves. We should tell you first that this de luxe cruise is aboard the former Matson line ship SS Mariposa. the glamerous cruise ship you've probably seen docked at Ogden Point many times in the past. She now belongs to the Pacific Far East Line. Who have planned this premiere cruise for March 9, 1972. We usually have our hair done at House of Glamour's Junction shop because it's close to where we live ... so we didn't get to really have a good look at the new salon in the Bank of Commerce Bldg. until last Friday ... As you know, they've moved away from View St. ... to these brand new premises in Victoria's newest office building ... and you'll find H of G in the lower concourse ... Talk about elegant surroundingsg ... Soft rugs, crystal chandeliers, the whole bit ... Enough to make you want to linger all day! ... Much more privacy in the new place too ... it's laid out differently so you're not visible to all comers ... Same friendly and expert staff though ... Mr. Charles, Mr. Donald, Tina, Edwina, Grace ... Dorothy (for manicures) ... and of course, Danny himself ... Just walking in to this lush salon makes you feel beautiful ... and you'll welk out looking like a million ... Don't forget the Junction shop either ... so very handy to park and pop into ... for the clever ministrations of Marcia and Linda ... and Danny on Thursdays ... Nice informal atmosphere, and everyone as friendly as can be ... Go just as you are, no need to dress up ... Remember, though, that the Junction H of G is closed on Wednesdays ... These rubbings by B.C. craftswoman Janet Rippingale, are done on heavy duck canvas ... in earthy oil paint colors ... but they can be made to order in colors to blend into your room ... Really exciting! ... Hangings cost $20, $30 and $40... while you can get smaller prints ... nice for framing ... for a mere $4.50... If you'd like something unusual, do be sure to see them! ... Also new at Handloom ... delightful cedar and wood carvings by M. Kortt ... There's a gorgeous mountain goat ... owls in several sizes ... nut bowl in the shape of a big bird whose cut-out tail-forms-the handle ... Kortt's bird mobiles are mighty striking too ... One with out-spread wings, another a group of three birds in flight ... And we love Kakinuma's impressionistic figure called "Protection" ... A big bird form enfolding her baby ... Probably one of the best things this artist has ever done! ... Handloom, 625 Trounce Alley, 384-1011 and Empress Hotel, 384-1518.

Well, Sandor is eight now, and every time I try to discipline him, his father jumps in and says (right in front of the boy) "Don't be so hard on the kid. He's only a baby."

Last night I told Sandor to turn off his TV as it was almost midnight, so he says to me, "Oh, drop dead!" I pulled him out of bed and gave him a temperature with my open hand on his and he helled for his father to come and "save"

Bill yanked the kid away from me as if to protect him from some cruel monster and said, "Don't you ever lay a hand on my son again." The boy's tears dried up in two minutes and he stuck his tongue out at me. So, what am I supposed to do with a kid like that? All By Myself

DEAR ALL: The problem is not the kid, it's your husband. If you could get his brains unbraided, your son would be fine. Children are experts at the divide and conquer technique. Any child a decade ago. Before another decade is out, the local schooners may have passed from the province's life.

Some of the abandoned sea orphans are sighing at their moorings; some lie halfmoorings; some lie half-submerged in coves and inlets around the island, gradually being battered to pieces by the pounding seas and the shifting sands. But some, still sound of keel and timber, are being repaired and returned to the ocean.

Take the case of the Ella C. Travers. a two-master that Travers, a two-master that for years fished and freighted in Placentia Bay, on the province's south coast. She now is owned by two young Americans, Allan Whipple and Joe Vatter.

Her second lease on life began last summer when Allan, after searching through Maine and Nova Scotia for a suitable craft, came to New-foundland and found the schooner abandoned on a beach on the south shore of the Avalon Peninsula.

The owners of the Travers, who had not maintained or operated the vessel for some time, were happy to sell, and Allan made the purchase and sent for Joe to help in the restoration work.

TOOK WHOLE SEASON

Beginning in early summer, it took the pair a whole season to repair the vessel's hull, install masts and rigging, replace planking and paint her from keel to mast

Both men, who are Massa-chusetts residents, plan to use the Travers as a chartered craft for big game fish such as swordfish off the eastern seaboard. A trans-Aflantic crossing is "definitely in the cards," the vessel's new Germany: here's why flying there on one plane is better than two.

Let's face it, most people carry on board as much hand luggage as they're possibly allowed - coats, cameras, books, bags, cosmetic cases, parcels. And often kids too.

Which is OK until you have to start carting it all around airports and transferring from one plane to another.

With Atlantic 71, once you're on, you're on until Germany. And even though we touch down briefly in Copenhagen, you don't have

And neither does all your hand luggage.

Mothers needn't transfer their children, yet you can slip off to shop duty-free or grab a coffee and leave everything behind sure it's safe.

The other ways—through places like Montreal, New York or Amsterdam involve changing planes, transfer hassles and carrying that luggage with you all the way.

Obviously, we're the most convenient way to Germany. We're the fastest way out of the West, for starters and we offer comfortable, same plane service.

But we can also offer an alternative to those people with a little extra time on their hands. If you specially want to see Britain, you could catch our famous Western Arrow to London, and connect to Frankfurt later.

No extra cost. Either way, you still get Atlantic 71. An all-out effort from all of us at Air Canada to make sure that if you're not coming with us because we're convenient, you'll be coming because we care for you more.

London Fire Chief Arthur Nicholls says: "If people were fully aware of the fire risks in hotels where they book in, they would not sleep so sound!" so soundly

A new fire precautions bill, currently in the parliamen-tary pipelines, will give local fire officers much greater powers than their present advisory ones. It is designed to strengthen and rationalize the existing law, so diffused among a multiplicity of statutes governing public build-ings that virtually the only legal liability imposed on hotel owners is to provide an escape route.

There is no single law compelling hotel owners to install fire extinguishers, alarms or flame-proof doors. nor do their staff have to be trained in fire drill. All these will be enforced under the

Genesis Not Science But Hymn of Praise

Do the early chapters of Genesis purport to be history, factual history, history as we generally understand it?

Some editions of the Bible printed with dates at the head of each page, dates purportedly for the events described on the page. In such editions the first chapter of Genesis is given the date

But this dating is in no way, reflected in the early biblical manuscripts. If goes back only as far as 1650, when James Ussher, an Irich archbishop, somehow calculated that the creation took place in that year One of Ussher's contemporaries, a Cambridge scholar named John Lightfoot, was even more precise in his calculations: he said that heaven and earth were suddenly created by God on 23rd October, 4004 B.C. at 9 o'clock in the morning.

REPUDIATED

This kind of historical dating is repudiated by modern science. It is possible, of course, to question the ac-curacy of Ussher's dating without necessarily rejecting the general historicity of the creation story in Genesis. But does that effectively resolve the issue between what appears to be the biblical teaching on creation and modern scientific cos-mogony? (Cosmogony is theorizing on the origins of

At last there seems to be a truce in the great battle between the Roman Catholic faith and the materialist Communist ideology. Top level contacts are developing between the two Even in the Soviet Union, where Roman Catholics are a small minority of the religious community, a Vatican envoy has been given an encouraging reception.

Archbishop Augostion Casaroli, the Vatican's top diposessor of the control of the contr

Elsewhere in east Europe, church bells peal on Sundays and feast days, although the idology of communism denies the existance of god.

Even in Czechoslovakia where the liberal tide of 1968 has beesn turned back and where Catholics are againunder pressure, talks have opened in Prague between Vatican and Czechoslovak representatives.

There is growing talk of a papal visit soon to Poland and possibly also to Yugoslavia, and relations with other states are easing, too. Hungary has shown signs for the first time of wishing to reach an accommodation with the Roman Catholic authorities. Eighty Hungarian pilgrims — the first group to visit Rome in years — saw

Smashing the Atom at UBC

By DON VIPOND

Construction of the giant accelerator called TRIUMF on the UBC campus has passed the halfway point. It will be ready to smash its first atoms about November of 1973.

Designing a system for handling the potent beam of subatomic particles which will flash from the machine is the special assignment of University of Victoria scientists. The work is on schedule and progressing well, says Uvic physicist L. P. Robertson.

TRIUMF stands for Tri-University Meson Facility although four universities — UBC, Simon Fraser, Victoria Alberta partners in the project with "facility" million system for taking tiny fractions of matter, whirling them in faster and faster circles with an enormous circles with an enormous electromagnet and then slinging them down a tunnel at half the speed of light to hit selected targets.

With velocity like that, the roton bullets hit atoms in the target hard enough to split them, opening for an instant the weird world of subatomic particles, elements far smaller than the smallest which can be seen with the most powerful microscope TRIUMF and its research materials offer a bizarre

On a smaller scale than the atom's nucleus, which is made of protons and neutrons, scientific knowledge atom's becomes fragmentary and the TRIUMF project will help fill the gaps.

Earlier experiments have shown that when those protons streak down the tunnel to whack the carbon nucleii the collision frequently converts energy into very short-lived particles called mesons (rhymes with reasons).

times the proton beam will be thinner than a little finger. But it is lethal. It could punch its way through an inch-thick steel plate in a fraction of a second if misdirected.

Because of the radioactivity, shielding in the accelerator building in places involves walls of concrete 17 test thick The facility will be about 25 feet below ground with parts of it as deep as 40 feet. The design provides for draining adjacent ground water toward the building where it will be held and monitored for radio-month.

Research projects to be undertaken with TRIUMF over the next 10 years are now being planned. Much of its usefulness will depend on w innovative experimenters Sixty or more staff from the four universities plan using it. They will be joined by at least the same number of graduate fellows, staff from other institutions across Canada and outside the country and post-doctoral research fellows.

Twenty-two people at the University of Victoria are currently involved.

Part of the research with TRIUMF will be pure science, that is, a look into the unknown to answer questions ke how and why.

In the field of applied science, where immediate practical problems are tackled, TRIUMF could supply mesons which may prove the most efficient yet in radiating tumors.

Other forms of radiation destroy not only diseased tissue but healthy tissue en route to the diseased tissue. A Pi-meson deposits most of its energy where it stops and and this can be ontrolled.

REACTOR DELAYS MAY TRIGGER POWER CRISIS

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON (WP) - At least five and as many as 56 atomic power plants being built in the United States face delays in construction and operation as the result of tests that show possibly defective designs in their nuclear fueled reactors.

The five plants alone repre sent an investment of more than $1 billion and an electric power output of over four million kilowatts, which is enough to light up a city the size of Chicago. If these plants were delayed for any length of time, the delays could be enough to trigger power crises in Florida, New York, and Michigan when York and Michigan where they're being built.

Far more serious is the impact any serious delays might have on another 51 plants being built or about to be built, since they account for more than 42 million kilowatts of planned power and an investment of more than $10 billion in more than 20 states. Delays in their construction could be enough to trigger a nationwide power shortage.

The delays were caused by six straight failures of fabora-tory - sized atomic reactors to cool themselves down in emergencies called "loss of coolant" failures. Each time, the emergency procedure for cooling down the hot nuclear cores backfired in tests, causing the simulated reactors to out themselves down.

"These tests were not fair models of real reactors, AEC official said. "Nevertheless, we have to be concerned by the failures and the outside possibility that we might have a fundamental problem in design."

"If you get a loss of coolant and them a loss of emergency coolant in a real accident," one official said, "your reac-tor core would overheat and probably melt under tempera-tures in excess of 5,000 degrees.

"The core would probably crumble," he went on, "and although you've got 10 or 12 feet of reinforced concrete under the core it might melt through all that. There would be steam explosions and there is a possibility of the reactor

Basic Design May Be At Fault

bursting. Nobody knows for sure what would happen."

The chances of basic design problems are slim, AEC officials claimed, but if the emergency coolant designs don't work it would affect the nuclear plants being built and 16 plants already in operation.

If the designs prove defective, the plants operating today might have to be shut down while the designs were being corrected. "We have told five utilities they can expect licensing delays on five nuclear power plants," an official of th AEC's regulatory staff said.

"These five were chosen because they were all at a junction where some action had to be taken. They had to be told they could not meet their deadlines.

The five utilities are Consolidated Edison Co. and Long Island Lighting in New York, Florida Power & Light Co. and Detroit Edison Co. and Consumers Power Co. in Michigan. The Con Ed, Flor Power & Light and Consumers Power plants are ready to begin making electricity, the other two are about to begin construction.

How long the delay in operation and construction will be is anybody's guess. One AEC official said the five utilities can expect delays of at least one month, probably three months

And just what kind of evidence would suffice to convince a judge? "Hearing voices in the bedroom and creaking bed springs would be about the minimum," answered McArthur.

It costs $250 or more to prove a spouse adulterous. A prospective client signs a "semi-contract" granting per-mission to investigate and stating the description and

"I pull up at her house around 8 and wait for an hour. If she comes out I follow; if not, I go to another case. I can often tell where she's going by the way she's dressed — fancy dress means dancing at some nightclub and casual clothes bowling.'

"Tailing her, I find she meets a man and they go into a show. I make a note of the car's license number, and where it's parked, and go work another case. Two hours later, when the show is over I come back and wait for them to come out."

'Usually they end up going either to his or her house. If the man just escorts her to the door, then my time has been wasted. But if he goes inside, then I hang around to see what happens "

see what happens."
"If I can see the bluish haze of the T.V. set or the other lights on, I know they're just talking. But when the lights go out, I start walking up and down the street in front of the house with my binoculars. Sometimes I have to prowl around the house for a better view.'

In nine years McArthur has never lost a case or had anybody take a swing at him, although he has come pretty close to it. Once he had a particularly good view of the antics of a couple in the livingroom. Unfortunately a street-light gave the couple an equally good view.

Private Detective Admits He's Snoopy,

But 'There's a Lot More to It Than That'

The man come out and demanded to know what McArthur was doing. "I told him I was looking for my lost dog. He believed me."

The biggest beef of a private investigator is that his licence gives him no more rights than anybody else, said McArthur. Though he may walk up to the front and back door of a house along the sidewalk, it is against the law to prowl around.

"If a policeman catches me prowling around, I can be arrested for trespassing or breaking and entering. Ninetynine times out a hundred he'll just tell me to leave. I say yes nicely, and go back to the someone, but I'm only doing it because they're doing what they're not supposed to," he added. "A person has the right to know where and what his spouse is doing. They have the right to hire a private investigator, who has more time and experience to find out for them.

His work is interesting and challenging. It's always changing and there's a certain thrill in doing a good job.

So far he has only been taken to court once for invading personal privacy. He lost the first round in the B.C. Supreme Court, not on the count of privacy invasion, but for "over-indulgence in tail-ing." The plaintiff claimed that being followed so wore his nerves out that he had to take tranquilizlizers. The Appeals Court reversed the decision, after McArthur's lawyer proved that the man had been popping pills long before.

More law divorce laws have brought business down quite a bit, according to McArthur. It used to be necessary to hire a lawyer, and usually an investigator as well. Now a person with a bit of intelli-gence can do without both.

He said that he agreed with the new divorce laws, though.
"It should be easy to get a divorce, but harder to get married."

"Personal privacy is very important to me," McArthur

Search-Rescue Force To Be Bolstered

Federal plans are in the offing, according to Esqui-malt-Saanich member of Parliament David Anderson, to bolster manpower for search and rescue operations in British Columbia this summer.

But the Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Victoria is at present unaware of any such plans. "It's a good idea and we would enjoy having extra facilities," said senior staff facilities, officer Major Gordon Bissell on Friday.

In a letter this week to sidney Council, Anderson said in conversation with the minister of national defence, he was told that even prior to the recent marine tragedies a review of existing facilities was under way."

"Among possible changes to be made is transfer of a Department of National Defence Search and Rescue Labrador helicopter from the mainland to the Island."

Regarding additional man-power, Anderson stated "the Department of National of Transport have not decided how they can best allocate this new manpower. but I am expecting a decision Sidney Council wrote

On May 7, Mr. Davis told the Radio and Television. News Directors Association of Central Canada at Hamilton that his government is creating a department of transport and communication which would presumably seek to relieve the federal government of its jurisdiction over many aspects of communications.

Sinking of Bismark a Mighty Task

LONDON (Reuter) Thirty years ago Friday the pride of the German navy, the battleship Bismarck, was cornered and sunk off the coast of France after a weeklong chase spread over two million square miles of water and involving nearly 50. Britton floating fortress, 3,500 German and British sailors lost their lives. The ship's destruction helped ensure the safety of Britain's vital convoy routes to Canada and the United States for the rest of the Second World - War

The Bismarck, launched in February, 1939, six months. February, 1939, six months before the outbreak of war, had a complement of 100 officers and 2,000 men. Its top impressive armory. On May 18, 1941, it sailed from Gdynia, Poland, on its first operational voyage accompanied by the heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen. Their task was to harry Allied shipping and sever Britain's lifeline of fuel, arms and food from North America. Nine days later the Bismarck was at the bottom of the Atlantic.

SPOTTED FROM AIR

On May 21, the two ships entered the Norwegian, fjord of Grimstad, south of Bergen. They were spotted and photo-graphed for the first time by a British plane. The Royal Navy prepared to pounce. The cruisers Nor folk and Suffolk blocked the Denmark straits, The battle cruiser Hood and the battle-ship Prince of Wales watched Iceland. The battleship King George V waited at Scapa Flow, Scotland

German tleet commander Admiral Lutjens tried to slip his slips through the Denmark straits under cover of poor visibility. The Suffolk and Norfolk stuck to them like limpets. By May 24, the Hood and the Prince of Wales managed to position them-selves face to face with the German giant.

PRESTON PATRICK, Eng. land — The day we were chased off a rounded, heath-ery hill by 12 black bulls will long be remembered, for it sparked some hilarity in this quiet corner of the English Lake District.

The bulls weren't coming at full tilt, but their heads were slightly lowered and they trotted after us with that grimly dogged look you see on the faces of Dallas Road waterfront joggers. Daughter Jill, 22, was first the gate and, with a the iron chain that enabled us to scramble through the five-barred gate into the lane. The 12 bulls then ranged the mselves alongside the rocky wall that hordered their private domain and glared at us with a peculiar intensity, as if thinking of writing to the papers about it.

Yes, we are far removed from the peace and charm of old Victoria, but the distant peaks of the Pennines are, powerfully reminiscent of the Olympics; the tree-clad slopes of Lake Windermere recall the Okanagan; the broad open spaces on every side suggest British Columbia's Cariboo country.

* * *
The North American concept of Britain as a crowded ittle island is abruptly shat-tered when you get away from the cities. We are 50 miles north of the busy seaport of Liverpool and only six miles from the old Roman town of Kendal (once plundered by marauding Scots) yet all we can see from here are miles of rolling hills and grassy farmland, dotted with grazing sheep and the oc casional squadron of bulls.

Since leaving Victoria last year, we have had to adjust

Rare Eggs Collected In N.W.T.

FORT SMITH, N.W.T. (CP) Canadian and United States hiologists collected 11 eggs this week from nests of the-rare whooping crane in Wood Buffalo National Park.

Are Risky Fire Hazard

LONDON (CP) - The fire which killed eight persons in a west London hotel recently ictoria came to the throne in 1837 — lacks central heating but houses a sturdy old-fashioned kitchen range, fed has thrown a glaring light on the lack of adequate fire protection in many of the small, cheap hotels springing up under the tourist flood. through winter nights of

One national newspaper reaches the chilling con-clusion that there is at resent "no law to save uests" in British hotels.

London Fire Chief Arthur Nicholls says: "If people were fully aware of the fire risks in hotels where they book in, they would not sleep

A new fire precautions bill, currently in the parliamen-tary pipelines, will give local fire officers much greater powers than their present advisory ones. It is designed to strengthen and rationalize the existing law, so diffused among a multiplicity of statutes governing public build-ings that virtually the only legal liability imposed on hotel owners is to provide an

KNEW LITTLE ENGLISH

As in many London hotels in these days of high labor costs, the staff of the firedamaged establishment were mostly from southern Europe and had only slight command of English. They proved un-able to understand instructions shouted by the firemen. The Greater London Council, which does have power to ensure that new and rebuilt hotels are constructed from fireproof materials, is tooth-less at present when it comes enforcing regulations on interior safety devices

Britain has an average of 12 hotel fires a week, and the numbers are rising year by year. The worst in recent history occurred on Boxing Day, 1969, when a 15th century timbered inn at Saffrom Walden, Essex, burned down with the ross of 11 lives.

GAINS IN URGENCY

The problem is clearly gaining urgency as low-priced hotels proliferate to house the ever-growing numbers of foreign visitors. This year for the first time the tourist influx to the British capital is expected to outnumber don's own population of eight million.

Central London alone has 1.269 hotels, ranging from world-famous luxury estab-lishments to seedy, bed-and-breakfast 1 o d g i n g s in decaying Victorian houses around the main railway terminals.
